I'm trying to understand calibre 200 a bit better & it's transitions, so I'm hoping you can help me. Based off your post and the markings on this photo of 200 in 1926 parts supplement B here. I'm thinking this must be a late production 200 below, correct? Would you please be able to give me a more precise production date for this movement here? I only have a window of 1922 to 1926....not sure how accurate that is. Here is the dial side. I'm not including case data bc I it's likely a recase. I guess my final thought or question is, what is the set in stone order of the full transitions of D version, S version, & G W Co version of 200? Thank you!
