I am seeking hands to complete this restoration. I believe the hands would of been yellow, perhaps called plume or dart if I recall correctly. I would appreciate your help

I can't help, but that's a stunning watch. If you can get a blue set, can ID plate them gold? I've had them plate yellow hands white with rhodium, but not sure what they can do with blued steel.

He's looking for 117 hands in Gilt. Unfortunately, they are hard to come by, since they predate most of the assortments. My assortment is missing them too.

I'm looking The Watch Repairer's Reference and I think these hands are called Pax.

I've never seen them in an assortment. Although I do have Guild-era assortments of blue steel and luminous hands. I'd imagine there was a gilt one too, but I've never come across one. Any time I've needed gilt hands, I've just had to be on the lookout for a loose donor movement.

I have... :lol:

The box weighs 50lbs no kidding!

I don't have the conversion chart and not sure if the watchmaker was shifting parts around in them. Most are the winding and setting bits. Not sure I want to give these up because I have a few quardons waiting in the wings myself. I'll search the rest and see if there are dups. The OP doesn't post much here so not sure he will be back.

I don't have any Quadrons waiting in the wings and also have a full 377 bottle. If OP wants them I'll be happy to give them up.

I thank everyone for the responses. This has been an ongoing project for about 6 months. The dial has raised gold numbers, I want to keep the restoration as close to original as possible. I have a collection of Quadrons, but none with the gilt hands. If the hands show I'll fit, I am happy to pay for them. Thank you for all the help<. Message me

I'll post pics when I am done. I have two other Quadrons in the pipeline almost completed, see pic
