Hello,

I found a Ladies Pan Am buried in my box of watches in need of repair. It's missing the case back and I wonder if anyone has a Guildite case baok that would fit this watch they are willing to sell. This watch has a 210SS movement that had a broken staff, but I've taken care of that already. A couple of photos showing case dimensions are attached.

Turns out this is not a Pan Am after all. I should have done more research. It looks like an Import 259 as Jenneke noted some years ago.

Nevertheless I have found a Guildite case back to fit and have completed servicing the movement.

Movement is a 210SS. Replaced the balance from a donor and installed a new stem. Otherwise it's running well and keeping time.

Nice that you saved a ladies! I find these models misleadingly small. My dials look way worse too

Hi,
Glad you got a back. Earlier this year I acquired one of these lady's watches, and have discerned that there are two styles of them that are similar. Can you show the back on yours? I'm also curious on your movement serial number. I'll post a photo of the one I got in a new thread.

The movement serial number is 1I-25349. Attached are photos of the Guildite back I got for the watch.

Then I would say that the case back and the movement serial are in alignment with the watch Jenneke shared, more than mine or Barney's
