Another one recently dug out of the "to-do" pile. This one is going in my collection, not for sale, at least not at this time! This is one of the "Deco-ey" styled Quadrons versus the later streamlined ones. Love the tonneau cutout in the bezel.

Bruce
 Nice watch, I have the same model.
It was still being advertised up to 1933!
A couple of things, what makes this a Alpina movement? I was under the impression the early Quadron movements 117, 119 and the 123 were made in house! If they were using contract movements the dial would be unmarked and not marked Precision?as the 157 Quadron, and so would the movement?
Would you happen to know if its a re-dial, as the sub second marking do not match the ad, or the watch I have.

Agree with Bazzab.
